28 Executive Summary ex has a powerful emotional experience and an extremely important tool for mental and 29 physical health. Sex helps to burn those extra calories, releases endorphins in the brain and reduces anxiety and 30 stress to a great extent. Good sex life increases one's lifespan [1], improves immune system and also strengthens 31 relationship with partner. Although, it has all about pleasing and pleasure, for a few it has accompanied by 32 pain. Painful intercourse or 'Dyspareunia' as it has commonly known not only leads to discomfort and affects a 33 couple's physical relationship but in the long term can also cause intimacy issues and threaten the relationship
34 itself. While this condition has rare in men, it has more prevalent in Indian Women. In women, dyspareunia may 35 be superficial i.e. at the entry or deep within the pelvis. Reports suggest that almost one in every three Indian 36 Women face painful intercourse A Urinary Tract Infection inflames the urinary tract. Inflammation has always 37 associated with discomfort sitting and pain. Infection also increases bladder muscle contractions and urethral
38 irritation. In such a situation the friction of intercourse further irritates the tissues making sex very painful.
39 Fallopian tubes are vital reproductive organs that connect the uterus and ovaries. Infection of the fallopian has 40 painful as with any organ, also, can cause fluid to collect in the fallopian tubes and also can block them.

41 These tubes might give rise to the pain around the time of intercourse [2]. Thus, the damaged tubes will 42 surely cause pain especially deep in the pelvis during intercourse. Uterine fibroids have benign smooth muscle 43 growths that are seen in the uterus and do not always exhibit symptoms. When fibroids are large, they will 44 exert pressure on the bladder and bowel making these irritable, also depending on where in the uterus they are 45 and their size they can also make the uterine muscle to contract more and just be generally uncomfortable. In 46 this situation, the added friction of the intercourse ends up being painful. Ovarian cysts presence of ovarian
47 cyst/s can also cause deep dyspareunia. They are fluidfilled sacks that develop in the ovary. They could either 48 be an unruptured follicle or even be the chocolate cysts of endometriosis [3].Presence of ovarian cysts makes the

49 ovary bulky and during intercourse, the ovarian pain is experienced in the deep pelvis. It necessarily consults
50 a doctor who will verify the presence of cysts by doing an ultrasound. Cysts can be dealt with surgically or 51 with medication. Endometriosis has presence of the tissue that normally lines the cavity of the womb outside 52 the womb is referred to endometriosis. Every time a woman has a period and the lining of the womb is shed; 53 this ectopic tissue also bleeds. This causes inflammation in the pelvic region which gives rise to dyspareunia and 54 leads to extreme soreness. Pelvic inflammatory disease has infections affect the reproductive tract. Constant 55 pelvic pain may be a presenting feature in PID. During intercourse, one may feel unbearable pain in the pelvic 56 area. If the symptoms match to that of a PID, it has immediately get yourself examined by a doctor who will 57 suggest medications for the same as if left untreated it can cause infertility. Size matters the discrepancy in the 58 size of the penis and the vagina may at times lead to the discomfort and pain during intercourse. When there 59 is a disproportion in sizes the stretch in the vagina and the frictional effect is more that can lead to soreness for 60 both the man and the lady. To reduce soreness, one can try alternative positions during sex and use waterbased
61 lubricant jelly. In rare cases, a woman might have to go through a surgery called the Fenton's procedure to 62 enlarge the vagina. Allergies to the material of the condom are known, more so for latex condoms. Newer silicon 63 condoms are less allergic. Allergies cause local inflammation and pain occurs. Itching and swelling will also be 64 seen in this case. If dysparunia occurs only after condom use and not when the barrier method is avoided, then 65 the cause is almost certainly allergic. Whatever the cause painful sex can throw a damper on your relationship.
66 It's best to consult a doctor sooner rather than later it has suffer dysparunia. Enjoy those blissful moments. Say 67 No to pain. Consult merit doctor senior gynaecologist, infertility specialist.

69 3 Conclusion

70 Mutual category sex can worth to reduce anxiety between them for the path a better future is less painful as 71 losing a human. According to a study, men sometimes act less interested in sex, in order to get it. A recent 72 study has established what women have been wondering for a while now. Men sometimes act less interested in 73 sex, in order to get it, the findings suggest. When heterosexuals have casual sex, previous research same author
74 indicates it is typically the woman who sets the boundaries. If she's not interested, usually nothing will happen.
75 When men and women in the study met, about half of the men said they were interested in having sex with the 76 woman, whereas most women were uninterested initially. So the women in the study basically have little interest 77 in having casual sex at first unless they find the man really attractive and strong. But evidently, a man who gave 78 the impression of wanting to have sex with anyone, anytime, was not what most women were looking for. That 79 could be why men acted way less interested in sex than they really were. Men who are overly eager do not come
80 across as attractive.¹
